LITTLE INTEREST IN CITY ELECTION

Present Mayor Candidate For Re-election—There Are Three Candidates For Police Judge—Two Council Tickets.

Very little, if any, interest is being taken in the election of the city officers for Mayor and Police Judge and members of the Council. Possibly the candidates believe in personal work and have been doing most of their canvassing in that way, for they have made very little demonstration of their enthusiasm in a public manner.

Because of the fact that a number of the citizens are employed by the rail road and are officers of the Cloverport Light and Ice Co., they are not eligible to hold a public office, therefore the responsibility rests upon a faithful few.

On the ticket for election of city officers this year are these men: C. W. Hamman, the present mayor, who has on his ticket for Councilmen, Leon McGavock, Barney Squires, Tom Bohler, Allen Black, James W. Lewis and Ed Whitehead.

Major Hamman's opponent is John A. Barry, who has on his ticket for Councilmen, H. L. Stader, Ernest Wedding, J. H. Brown, Fletcher Pauley, Jess Bohler and Payton Scott.

Candidates for Police Judge are: V. G. Babbage, Chris Brabant and John Dean.

The welfare and growth of a town rests largely upon the city officers to have an ideal town. Voters must elect the best men and it is time to get busy.

First Snow of the Season.

Mr. Winter is putting in his appearances good and early this year and if he continues through the next six months like he has started out, Mr. Coal Man and Mr. Gas Man may expect another prosperous season.

The first snow of the season fell Monday night about twelve o'clock and lasted nearly two hours, melting as fast as it came in contact with mother earth. Snow flurries were in the air for a short while Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Mattingly Entertains.

On Saturday afternoon of last week Mrs. Frank Mattingly gave a beautiful party at her home, The Castle in honor of her house guest, Mrs. J. T. McDonald of Princeton, Ky. Members of the Wednesday Club and a few visitors were invited to meet the guest of honor.

Thursday afternoon, Oct. 26, Mrs. Mattingly will be hostess to the Ladies Reading Club.

November 15.

The hunting season will soon open with prospects for good sport very bright. Quail and rabbits seem to be unusually plentiful, while it is no trouble to find squirrels. Ducks are beginning to come in. Several coons and possums have been captured by local sportsmen who love to prowl at night and listen to old Rowdy and old Barney when they bark "treed."

Rev. Lewis Receives Appointment.

Rev. Frank E. Lewis, a former pastor of the Cloverport Methodist Church was here Monday evening enroute to Columbia, Ky. He has been appointed by Bishop Murrah as a professor of Greek and Latin to teach in Columbia College, succeeding professor who was called in the first draft.

Little Boy Dies.

William Friel, five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Friel died after a short illness of pneumonia at his home in Plato Center, Ill. The remains were brought here Saturday for burial in the Catholic cemetery.

The child was a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan of this city.

Rev. Reeves Holding Revival.

Rev. R. E. Reeves, pastor of the Cloverport and Irvington Presbyterian churches is conducting a series of revival services at Round Pond church which is near Franklin, Ky.

Dr. J. L. Cotton of the Louisville Presbyterian Seminary will fill Rev. Reeves' appointment in Irvington, Sunday.

City in Darkness.

"Black as Egypt" truly expressed the state of affairs in this city Friday night at nine o'clock, when so unexpectedly the electric lights went out and folks had to retire by candle light. Part of the dynamo at the power house burned out and it was first thought it could not be repaired for several days, so the housekeepers were busy Saturday getting out their old standby, the coal oil lamp, but they were not needed long, for the light came on about 7 o'clock that evening. This is the first time the Cloverport Light Company, which was established three years ago, has ever had any serious trouble with the power plant and the citizens have been so accustomed to good service that it seemed difficult to do without lights even for a few hours.

Visitors From The County.

Sheriff A. T. Beard and Mrs. Beard, Hardinsburg and Mrs. Jess Moorman, Glen Dean motored here Tuesday and were guests of Mrs. Moorman's uncle, Mr. A. R. Fisher and Mrs. Fisher for the day. Mrs. Taylor Beard, Hardinsburg came with the party and spent the day with Mrs. James Cordrey.

Sunday To Be Day Of Prayer.

Washington, Oct. 21.—President Wilson today proclaimed Sunday October 28 the day of prayer for the success of American arms in the war in accordance with a recent resolution of Congress.

Help Win the War!

Buy a Liberty Bond on the Installment Plan

You may not be able to go to the front, but you can assist with your savings not only in the successful prosecution of the war in which we are engaged, but aid yourself through acquiring the habit of thrift. We have made it possible for everyone who can save $2.00 each two weeks to purchase a $50.00 United States Bond.

This method of purchase has been made as simple as possible.

THIS IS THE PLAN:

First payment on or before Nov. 15, 1917	$ 2.00
Twenty-four payments on or before the 1st and 15th day of each month up to and including Nov. 15, 1918	48.00
Interest at 4 per cent per annum allowed purchaser by the Bank	1.00

$51.00

For which we deliver to the subscriber a $50.00 Bond having attached a coupon for $1.00 payable the day the last payment on the contract is due Nov. 15th, 1918.

Upon application the bank will issue to the subscriber a contract card bearing the name and address of the purchaser, upon which receipt for payments will be given. The first payment will be $2.00. Payments of $2.00 are then due each fifteen days thereafter. Twenty-five payments being required to buy a bond.

Bonds of larger denominations may be purchased under the same plan.

The receipt card issued when the first payment is made must be presented with each subsequent payment.

Under this plan interest is earned by the subscriber at the same rate the bonds bear 4 per cent per annum being allowed by the bank on installments. The Bank makes no profit whatever on the transaction.

Upon completion of payments and surrender of contract the bond becomes the property of the purchaser.

In the event of default in promptly making any payment as agreed the holder of the card shall not be entitled to receive the bond subscribed for, but shall be entitled to receive without interest all money actually paid on the subscription.

NEARLY $40,000 SUBSCRIBED FOR LIBERTY BONDS

In Breckinridge County, Bank Of Hardinsburg And Trust Company Have Sold the Largest Amount.

The Treasury Department of the United States has issued a statement that there is an undue optimism over the sale of Liberty Bonds and it should be discouraged so that the American people will not cease to do their bit in subscribing for the Bonds. Thus far only 40 per cent or $3,000,000,000 of the hoped for maximum has been reached and during this week including Wednesday as a Liberty Bond Day and a holiday it is hoped the total amount of $15,000,000,000 will be reached.

Breckinridge county has had a share and has done quite a bit in the way of purchasing Liberty Bonds but there is time left to do more. Mr. Paul Compton, cashier of the Bank of Hardinsburg & Trust Co., and chairman of the Liberty Loan campaign in Breckinridge county reported Tuesday that nearly $40,000 had been subscribed in this county. $20,000 of this amount was subscribed for and sold by the Bank of Hardinsburg & Trust Co., $15,150 by the Breckinridge Bank of Cloverport and $4,000 by the First State Bank, Irvington, Ky. This makes a total of $39,200 and some banks have not reported yet.

Mr. Paul Compton, the cashier of this bank, was the host.

Saturday morning was a business session. Mr. L. L. Hudson was elected president; and Mr. J. C. Steele, vice-president.

The next meeting will be held in Elizabethtown.

There were one hundred and forty-five teachers enrolled.

Meade county won the banner. This is the fourth year they have won the banner.

FOOD PLEDGE IMPORTANT FACTOR IN WINNING WAR, SAYS SACKETT

Federal Food Administrator for Kentucky Explains
Reasons for Card Campaign Next Week

To the Housekeepers of Kentucky:

DURING the week beginning Sunday, October 28th, a campaign will be conducted in all parts of the United States for signatures for the Food Conservation Pledge prepared by Mr. Herbert C. Hoover, the National Food Administrator.

The canvass will be made during the week in question by the patriotic women who have joined the organization of the Food Conservation Division of the Council of Defense in each county of the State, and the object of this address of the Federal Food Administrator for Kentucky is to explain exactly what will be asked of the housekeepers of the State of Kentucky, why it is asked and what may be accomplished for our country and ourselves.

We wish to say at the outset that the campaign is city wide, state-wide and nation-wide. No sectarian or denominational lines are involved. The campaign is endorsed by the clergymen of all the churches of the state, by our leading professional and business men, by all who understand the importance of food conservation as a factor in winning the war.

Form of Pledge.

It is best to state exactly what will be asked by the canvassers of the housekeepers of Kentucky. They will be asked, first, to sign the Pledge Card of the United States Food Administration. What does that card bind the housekeeper to? Here it is, so all may judge for themselves:

To the Food Administrator:

I am glad to join you in the service of food conservation for our nation, and I hereby accept membership in the United States Food Administration, pledging myself to carry out the directions and advice of the Food Administrator in my home, insofar as my circumstances permit.

This is the pledge and the entire pledge. There are no dues of membership. Signers will then be asked to hang in the front windows of their homes cards bearing the shield of the United States in colors attesting the fact that they are members of the organization.

What the Pledge Means.

It is wise, we think, to say a few words in regard to the pledge. It means no more and no less than it reads. It will be observed that signers of the pledge are not asked to bind themselves to any particular things. They are not asked at this time to promise to observe meatless days or to abstain from using any particular kind of food. They simply agree to carry out the directions and advice of the Food Administrator "insofar as their circumstances permit." We are aware that conditions differ in different homes; that what is only a sacrifice to one may, under unusual circumstances, be an impossibility to another. Therefore the qualifying clause "insofar as my circumstances permit" appears in the pledge.

This qualifying clause brings the execution of the Food Administrator's advice down to the individual conscience of the housekeeper who signs the pledge. It is not expected that because of this qualification the pledge will go as nothing. It is, in fact, our hope and belief that those who sign this pledge will consider themselves units in a great army of American housekeepers who propose to serve their country and themselves by following as closely as may be possible the directions and advice of the Food Administrator, knowing as we do that those directions will be reasonable.

It seems hardly necessary for us here again to contradict the foolish rumors that have been circulated that it is the plan of the Food Administration to seize food found in private homes. No such thing was ever contemplated and will not be contemplated. Such a report is enemy propaganda purposely designed to defeat the objects of this great conservation movement.

Importance of the Work.

We feel that we can add little to what has already been said by the President, by Mr. Hoover, and by others qualified to speak on such subjects in regard to the importance of food conservation during the coming winter, and yet, as a housekeeper, speaking to housekeepers, I wish to say that we understand the importance of this work and believe that the housekeepers of the state will understand it.

Our country is engaged in a great war. Our sons are going out to give, if necessary, their lives for our country. These brave boys are willing to make, if necessary, the supreme sacrifice, that American ideals may endure, that American homes may be kept safe from the invader. All of us have work to do at this time and the work that may be done in the individual homes of America in avoiding waste and saving food may prove not the least effective move in winning the war.

Kentucky goes into the present winter in some ways well prepared. Employment is general, but prices are very high. The less that is wasted in the average household the less will have to be bought. The prices of foodstuffs offer an inducement to prudence, but unless there is organization and co-operation, the food that is saved in one home will be wasted in another.

Real Emergency Exists.

The men who are patriotically working in Washington for the country and in charge of this mobilization movement of our food know that a real emergency exists. The 1916 harvest left us no surplus. The 1917 harvest is in and they can count on the food that can be used for ourselves, for the allied nations and for our men at the fighting front. They know that if the same prodigality in the waste of food continues in America, if the same bountiful hospitality and lavish use is maintained in our own homes, there will not be sufficient available to maintain the armies who are fighting our battles on the western front of Europe.

They do know, however, that if there begins at once a concerted movement in all American homes to eliminate all unnecessary waste, a movement to follow the advice of the Food Administrator for the substitution of some foods for others which we are short, that the cumulative effect of that movement, covering throughout the country 23,000,000 American homes, will provide during the coming winter the food that will be necessary for us to export, in order to keep the civilian populations of France and England supplied, the armies upon the battle line and the wonderful army now being prepared by the United States, in their best fighting condition.

It is a real emergency in which they appeal to us, an emergency which can be met in no other way, and they are issuing this call to the women of America to look upon this matter in all seriousness and to be assured that the sacrifices they will make during this coming winter will provide the food which the President of the United States has said is one of the three great elements necessary to winning the war.

No suggestions will be issued that are not felt by those in authority to be extremely necessary, but they do hope that the people of America will respond to these suggestions as patriots determined to do their bit for the cause of civilization throughout the world and the maintenance of democracy.

F. M. SACKETT,
Federal Food Administrator for Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE BRANCH, RAILROADS' WAR BOARD

The railroads of the country report that on Oct. 1st the excess of unfilled orders from shippers for freight cars over and above the idle cars at different points number 70,380. This is the figure which has been commonly but inaccurately referred to as car shortage. This compares with the excess of unfilled car requisitions amounting to 17,682 on July 1st, 33,775 August 1st, and 34,605 on September 1st. The actual number of unfilled car orders on October 1st was almost identical with the number on October 1st last year, the figures being 97,572 for Oct. 1, 1917 and 97,854 for Sept. 30, 1916. The difference in the excess of unfilled orders over idle cars for the two years is accounted for by the fact that on September 30, 1916 as many as 34,157 cars were idle, whereas on October 1, 1917 only 24,192 were reported as idle, thus indicating a more efficient use of the available equipment on the part of the railroads. Returns to the Railroads' War Board show that the actual number of cars and locomotives now in service on American railroads is only slightly in excess of the number at this time last year. The War Board on Oct. 10th had been in existence exactly six months and the returns just at hand show that during that period the railroads of the country have rendered upwards of 15 per cent more service than they did during the same period last year with practically the same plant. The outstanding feature of the present situation is the degree to which the railroads are co-operating wholeheartedly with one another and with the Railroads' War Board in the effort to produce a maximum of transportation efficiency. As the demands upon the railroads incident to the war are apt to increase the need for the utmost cooperation on the part of all concerned will become increasingly greater.

$550 ALLOTED THIS COUNTY FOR Y. M. C. A.

War Work Fund. Kentucky's Share is $400,000. Conference Workers Will Meet in Owensboro October 30.

At a meeting of Y. M. C. A. secretaries which was held in Louisville recently, plans were made whereby the $400,000 which is this state's share of the $35,000,000, will be raised for Y. M. C. A. war work over the country.

The state has been divided into twenty districts and the quo divided among these districts. Louisville has pledged itself to raise $200,000 of the $400,000 to be raised in the state.

The amount set for this district is $9,675. Of this amount Daviess county will raise $4,250; McLean, $1,000; Ohio, $1,200; Breckinridge, $550; Hancock, $500; and Muhlenberg, $2,175.

A conference of district workers will be held in Owensboro on October 30, at which plans for the campaign will be taken up. It is expected that the campaign will be started shortly after this date.

The new fund being raised by the Y. M. C. A. will be used to carry on and extend the present splendid work being done in the army camps in this country and France. The movement of large bodies of troops to France is greatly increasing the work of the Y. M. C. A. and the original sum of $3,000,000 raised for social and recreational work for the benefit of the holders is proving entirely inadequate for the vast work being done

Should Farmers Blame The Railroads?

To The Editor of The Sun—Sir: In The Sun of October 7 I notice the heading "1,000 Carloads of Peaches Spoiled." Permit me to suggest the establishment of canning factories thus avoiding in the future a repetition of any such losses.

It appears that the farmers blame the railroads for a shortage of cars. I wonder if they ever use their gray matter sufficiently to figure out that they, the farmers themselves, are primarily to blame for this same shortage of cars, that they are continually fighting the railroad companies and exhorting the Interstate Commerce Commission against any and all necessary increases in freight rates on farm products.

Surely these farmers ought to know that the railroads would be only too glad to furnish them with all the cars they wanted if the farmers would only permit the railroads to obtain sufficient money, or even credit, with which to buy needed cars.

If the farmers would only work with the railroads (get together and talk it over) instead of working against them, the tillers of the soil would profit not only financially but intellectually.

Christmas Boxes Must Go Before November 15.

Christmas boxes to the soldiers in France must be sent before Nov. 15. The Government has fixed that day as the last day for the shipping of Christmas packages to the United States soldiers in Europe, an advice is being given to mail before that time to insure Christmas packages reaching their destination on time.

Uncle Sam is advising against the usual putting off of buying presents until last minutes, for so many things must be done at that time that there is considerable danger of a delay in mailing the bundle to Europe and, as a consequence, a failure of the bundle to arrive on time. Rather, say Federal authorities, mail what is ready as soon as it is ready and if there is more to be mailed before the date set as the closing one for Christmas shipments, send them separately.

GET OR GIVE.

For what do you live?
For what you get,
Or what you give?
Which is the dynamo
That makes you go?
Get? or give?
Get from the world its treasures,
Knowledge, friends, and health;
Heap to the full your measures,
God, and good, and wealth;
But—get to give.
Don't be a miser,
A slave to your gold;
Giving is wiser,
A hundred fold;
So—Get and give.
Get—you must,
If you would give;
Give—you must,
If you would live;
For getting without giving
Is existing, not living;
Then—Get and give and live.
—W. E. Raffety.

OUR HONOR ROLL.

It is with a great amount of pride and pleasure that we publish an Honor Roll of the Cloverport boys who are answering the Nation's call. We are glad and thankful that our pride in them is really a true pride, and we say true pride because we know that they represent a country which is not merely fighting and sacrificing lives for a selfish motive of gaining power and territory, but they represent the greatest country on earth which is fighting for principle and the vindication of human rights.

We honor and respect the individual who stands for high principles, and if necessary, sacrifices his life rather than lower his principles. Why shouldn't we have a great pride and honor in our Nation and still greater for those men who are and will represent it on the battlefields of Europe?

In getting up this Honor Roll we have tried not to leave off any boy from our town who is in service, but in all probability we may have omitted some, and in that case, we would be glad to have their names and address so they can be added to the list. This Honor Roll is to be posted in all of our local churches.

MCQUADY SCHOOL JOURNAL.

The first number of the McQuady School Journal, a four page three column paper, made its appearance last week. It is gotten out monthly in the interest of the McQuady school and the community surrounding. It is a "snappy" little paper and full of interesting reading. It is patronized liberally by the merchants of McQuady and elsewhere, and bids fair to be a great help to the community. It is needless to comment on its typography, for it was issued from the Breckenridge News office.

It pays to read every line in the Breckenridge News. Just last week we met a woman going to the wrong house for the Club meeting, all because she had failed to read the paper and notice the change of meeting place. And one man told us he had lost several dollars in selling his tobacco all because he was not a subscriber to the News and did not know the market price of the weed. The Breckenridge News will save you time and money. If it were not so, we would not ask you to read it or be a subscriber.

In this issue of the Breckenridge News you will find an interesting story entitled "Royal Relationship and the War," written by the editor of Farm and Fireside. The article explains very clearly the underlying causes of the war, and for that reason it is particularly timely to school boys and girls. We suspect that there are not many of them who know that the Kaiser, William II of Germany, is a first cousin to the King of England.

We are for a mayor and council who will enforce the chicken law, the stock law and the dog law. If people insist on having a farm on a fifteen square foot town lot, then something should be done to make them put up with their own stock and not let it be allowed to trespass on other people's property.

"Ferncliffe," the $8,000,000 home of Vincent Astor, which is situated on the Hudson river, has been given over to the War Department to be used as a hospital for convalescent soldiers who may be wounded in France and brought home to recover.

Remember your Christmas boxes which are to be sent to France must go by November 15, or else some soldier boy will have a mighty lonesome and home-sick feeling on Christmas day.

A fellow almost has to be richer than Croesus this day and time in order to meet the H. C. L. and the demands for charity.

This is "Potato Week." You are to observe it by eating "spuds," three times a day and leave off wheat bread.

FARM AND STOCK.

Next week will be a red letter week for food conservation. Beginning Sunday, October 28, the cry will be all over Kentucky "Serve by saving, because food will win the war," and every intelligent housekeeper will answer the call.

The bugle has sounded for each and every American housekeeper! Whether you live on a farm or in a city apartment, in a cottage or avenue residence, Uncle Sam is mobilizing you to do "your bit."

This great patriotic task can never be shouldered by one group of women working alone. Every housekeeper in America, no matter how large or small her family or pocketbook, must co-operate, must mobilize.

Mr. Sackett, Federal Food Administrator, says: "Food, not bullets, will win the war. Ours is a glorious opportunity. I trust it shall not be said of any Kentuckian that he or she was recreant to this solemn obligation—of keeping the wolf away from the door of the world!"

Another way for the farmer to do his "bit" is to buy a Liberty Loan Bond. When you purchase one of these bonds you do your country good; you do the cause of liberty and justice over the whole world good; you do yourself good; you do harm to the enemies of liberty and justice and civilization, and harm to the enemies of your country. You can buy one of these bonds on easy terms from the Bank of Hardinsburg & Trust Co. Do it today.

There never was a better time than right now to raise stock—good stock. No danger in the price. It will be good for years to come.

In Bourbon county a crop of fourteen acres of tobacco sold for $250 per acre.

Leo Scott, of Elizabethtown, sold his crop of 40 acres of corn at $60 per acre.

Mules and mule colts are in demand at good prices. Raise more mules.

Hudson-Kincheloe Wedding.

Miss Jessie L. Hudson became the bride of Mr. Morris Buckner Kincheloe, of Hardinsburg, Ky., on Thursday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Hudson, of Lester street.

At 9:30 o'clock the bridal party took position in front of a band of fife with the Rev. Clarence Burton, of Sikeston, officiating in the presence of fifty guests. Using the Episcopal ring ceremony the former Poplar Bluff pastor united the pair in wedlock.

In a setting of green and white, in which decoration idea green and white roses were the conspicuous figure, the bridal party found their way to the floral altar to the air of Mendelssohn's wedding March, with Miss Myers, of Little Rock, presiding at the piano and Miss Eloise Tyler playing the violin.

The bride was gowned in white satin and wore a veil caught with orange blossom graniture and wore a corsage bouquet of roses. Little Virginia Williams, ringbearer, who carried the band of gold in an ornated basket; wore a dress of white tulle.

Following the ceremony Mrs. Claud Marshall sang "Oh Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly." Then came a dainty two course luncheon. Small keys to the ladies and small silver shoes to the gentlemen were given as favors. In the refreshments the color scheme was also carried out.

Out of town guests in attendance at the wedding were: Miss Gibson, of Cairo; Miss Davis, of Paducah; Miss Proctor, of Doniphan; Miss Myers, of Little Rock, and Miss Benton, of Sikeston.

Many beautiful gifts were presented the contracting parties by friends.

Mrs. Kincheloe is one of the well known young women of this city and has a wide reputation as a musician and reader, having been in lyceum work the past few years. She has traveled extensively and has a charming personality.

The groom is a business man of high standing in his home community, being a financier and interested in the banking business of the Kentucky town where he has made his home.

The couple will make their home in Boulder, Colorado, following their honeymoon. Mr. Kincheloe will be in the banking business in the Colorado town—Poplar Bluff (Missouri) American.

You Can Afford A GRANT SIX

PERHAPS you think you cannot afford a motor car because you think that a satisfactory car must cost $1100 or $1200. But if you will look over the Grant Six at $875 you will find that you can buy a full-sized, full-powered five passenger car with every improvement and refinement and that you can run this car for a good deal less than you think.

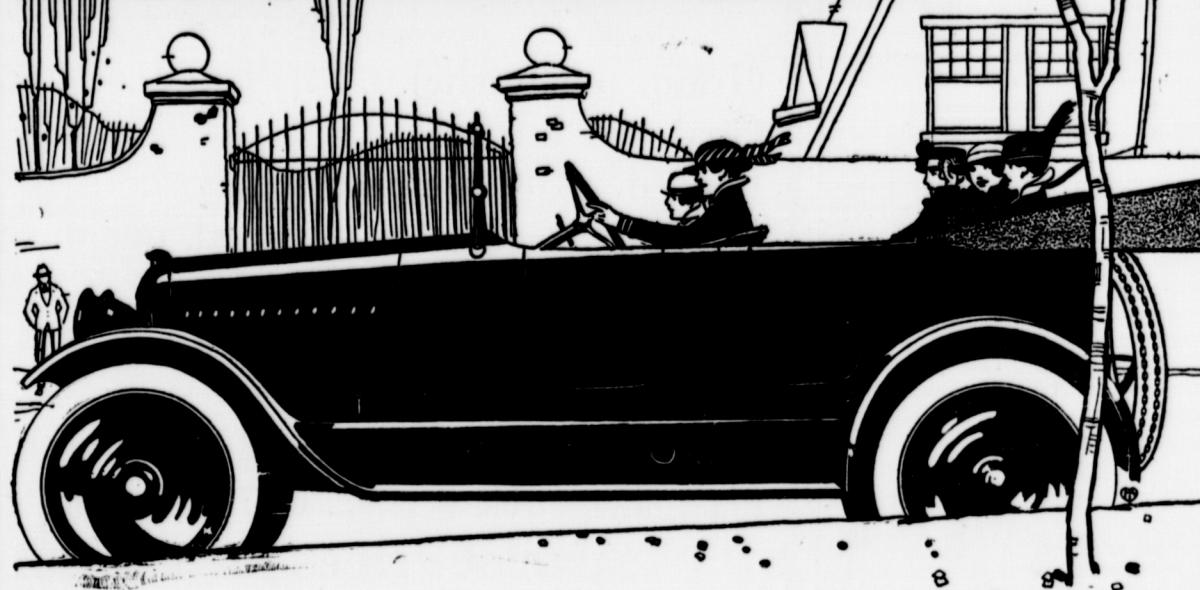

The Grant Six gets, on an average, 20 miles to a gallon of gasoline, 900 miles to a gallon of oil and 7000 miles or more out of a standard tire.

It is so sturdily built that your repair bills are extremely slight. Above all it is a car for the "first-car" buyer because its economy and dependability do not demand experience in running a car.

You want a car—everybody does. Get a Grant Six now and enjoy it. It will give you everything including looks, that any car up to $1100 can give you.

The Parcel Post sale, given Thursday evening by the members of the Wednesday Club, was altogether a marked success. The crowd, which was large considering the inclement weather, was a most sociable one therefore the occasion proved very delightful as well as profitable.

The sale of the parcels was intensely exciting just to settle one's curiosity of knowing what you would get, was worth the popular price of 12 and 15 cents. Some of the parcels were auctioned and the one which aroused the bidders to the highest pitch was a distinguished looking envelope marked from the White House. By request of one of the members, Mrs. J. Proctor Keith, the First Lady of the Land, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, sent a beautiful card of the White House with her visiting card and "Best Wi s" attached. The much coveted parcel brought $1.50. Sold to Mr. M. M. Denton.

The proceeds from the sale and from the booths, where delicious sandwiches, coffee, home-made candy, and ice cream were sold, amounted to $42 48. There were a few expenses to be met.

ROYAL RELATIONSHIP AND THE WAR.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning the Lineage of the Royal Families Written By Editor of Farm and Fireside.

"I am a reader of your chats on various subjects," writes a farm woman in New York State whose son has been called in the first draft, "and what I now ask would be appreciated, I think, by other subscribers as well as myself. Please explain the true relationship of the present sovereigns of England and Germany and the ex Czar of Russia. Also is there any English blood in the Kaiser or his family and is there any German blood in the King of England or members of his family. And if it is all a family quarrel, please explain why the flower of American homes should be sacrificed to settle a quarrel which we had no part in starting."

The questions asked are fair ones. Parents whose sons have been called to the colors have a right to demand such information. Here are the answers: The Kaiser, William II of Germany, is a first cousin of the King of England Frederick III, former Emperor of Germany, married Victoria, the eldest daughter of Queen Victoria of England, and the present Kaiser is a son of that union. This makes the Kaiser a grandson of the former Queen of England.

King George V of England is of German blood to the following extent: Queen Victoria married her cousin, Prince Albert, who was the son of a German duke. Furthermore Queen Victoria's mother was a German princess. The Queen spoke English with a decided German accent during her entire life. Queen Victoria's first son, Edward, became Edward VII of England, and the present King George V is his son. Thus the King of England and the Emperor of Germany are not only cousins but are both grandsons of former Queen Victoria.

The royal families of England and Russia are related in a similar manner. Nicholas II the ex-Czar, is a cousin of King George of England, their mothers being sisters, both daughters of old King Christian of Denmark. The ex-Czar also married a German princess, who happens to be a cousin of King George. German blood is well represented in practically all the royal families of Europe, but is especially strong in the Romanoff line. The Russian imperial family has married so extensively into German royal houses that their blood is practically as much German as the Kaiser's. Princess Sophie of Prussia, sister of the Kaiser, is the wife of ex-King Constantine of Greece. King Albert of heroic Belgium likewise has a German wife, Duchess Elizabeth of Bavaria. These are some of the royal personages whom the war has brought into prominence, but there is a similar intermingling of blood in the royal families of Spain, Norway, Sweden, Holland, and other countries that are still remaining neutral.

The underlying causes of the war, so obscure at first, having become clearer each succeeding month. Political intrigue in Germany, by which the princely military families hoped to re-establish their fast-waning power by bringing about a conflict, and a now well known plan of world conquest politically and commercially, which the ruling classes in Germany have been fostering, are to day only too apparent.

The foundations of Germany's dream for a greater empire were laid back in 1883, when Bismarck dominated the politics and diplomacy of central Europe, and established the system of alliances. Trouble was brewing between Russia and Austria, and Russian troops were threatening the Austrian frontier. The Czar assured Bismarck that peace would be maintained if Germany would support Russia. But Bismarck, forced to declare in favor of either Russia or Austria, formed an alliance with the latter, and later Italy was induced to join. This was the Triple Alliance, from which Italy diplomatically managed to excuse herself.

After her alliance with Austria, Germany cultivated the friendship of Turkey, and soon dreamed of an empire extending from the North Sea to Asia Minor. But whatever may have been the initial causes, the war is now clearly the resistance of democracy to despotism. The relationship of royal families is an important factor in so far as it complicates diplomacy and influences leadership, but this relationship did not bring on the war. If anything, it has postponed hostilities in some cases. Greece, for instance, would no doubt have joined the Allies much earlier save for the influence of Constantine's German wife.

In ancient times, when nations were small, the marriage of a princess of one royal house to the princess of a neighboring principality was a popular means of preserving peace. But such a flimsy foundation is of little import when a monarch becomes mad for conquest and big nations fight for their lives. When Napoleon threatened to conquer Europe, his Austrian father-in-law was one of the first to help crush him. And in the

HE'S A CLOVER-PORT MAN.

Who in Cloverport doesn't know the reliable tax collector? The advice of a man who is so well known as Mr. Chapin, should be well heeded. If you are one of the many who suffer from kidney weakness, is there any reason why you should delay following Mr. Chapin's example? Don't wait until dangerous Bright's disease or Dropsy sets in. Mr. Chapin says he found a permanent cure from kidney trouble and a bad back by using Doan's Kidney Pills. Here are his own words:

"Last summer I was down with my back and kidney trouble," says L. V. Chapin, tax collector, Cloverport, "as Doan's Kidney Pills had been recommended to me and seeing their ad in the local paper, I got a box at Fisher's Drug Store. In a very short time I was cured and have had no occasion to use Doan's Kidney Pills nor any other medicine since. Doan's Kidney Pills do just as claimed of them."

(Statement given Feb. 17, 1912.) On October 30, 1918, Mr. Chapin said: "The cure Doan's Kidney Pills made in my case, and that I mentioned in my former statement, has been permanent."

present war we must remember that royalty is a less important factor than in the past. The printing press and modern education have raised the average intelligence of the human race so that most any civilized nation has thousands of men qualified to direct affairs of state.

The people of one nation after another have come to the conclusion that royal families should either be dispensed with entirely or at least restricted in their authority. Of the fifty seven nations of the globe only six are now absolute monarchies, and these are largely in the Dark Continent. They are: Abyssinia, Afghanistan, Morocco, Siam, Oman, and Monaco. Twenty eight of the nations are republics, and the remaining twenty-three are limited monarchies, where the people hold the reins of government. The great majority of the world's population is self ruled. The principal republics are the United States, France, Portugal, China, Russia, Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Peru, and Venezuela.

Thus, except for Canada, practically all the Western Hemisphere is made up of republics. But the Government of Great Britain and her colonies is in most respects similar, and in some ways even more liberal, than our own; and the royal family is maintained largely as a matter of sentiment. But the English people are becoming less liberal in the annuities paid the royal family, and the dowries to princesses are limited by Parliamentary action. The King and Queen of England have been receiving about $2,350,000 annually, and the total expense of maintaining the royal household exceeds three million dollars. This figure will henceforth be reduced, and some of the estates and hunting preserves heretofore used for royal pleasure are being converted into farm land. The ruler of Austria receives from his people over $4,500,000 annually; the Sultan's income is $5,000,000; the Kaiser receives nearly $4,000,000, plus large incomes from the imperial estates; even the King of Siberia receives $540,000. Prior to his abdication, the Czar was the wealthiest man in the world. His private estates exceed 650,000,000 acres, in addition to vast forests and gold mines.

Thus, out of the carnage of war, the following benefits are already appearing. The people afflicted with sorrow and burdened by taxation are less tolerant of imperial pomp. They are demanding the division of royal estates into farms, and they are well aware that statesmen who have risen from the common people have ruled more wisely and are more loved by the people.

The foundations of Germany's dream for a greater empire were laid back in 1883, when Bismarck dominated the politics and diplomacy of central Europe, and established the system of alliances.

Trouble was brewing between Russia and Austria, and Russian troops were threatening the Austrian frontier. The Czar assured Bismarck that peace would be maintained if Germany would support Russia. But Bismarck, forced to declare in favor of either Russia or Austria, formed an alliance with the latter, and later Italy was induced to join.

This was the Triple Alliance, from which Italy diplomatically managed to excuse herself.

After her alliance with Austria, Germany cultivated the friendship of Turkey, and soon dreamed of an empire extending from the North Sea to Asia Minor. But whatever may have been the initial causes, the war is now clearly the resistance of democracy to despotism.

The relationship of royal families is an important factor in so far as it complicates diplomacy and influences leadership, but this relationship did not bring on the war.

If anything, it has postponed hostilities in some cases. Greece, for instance, would no doubt have joined the Allies much earlier save for the influence of Constantine's German wife.

In ancient times, when nations were small, the marriage of a princess of one royal house to the princess of a neighboring principality was a popular means of preserving peace. But such a flimsy foundation is of little import when a monarch becomes mad for conquest and big nations fight for their lives. When Napoleon threatened to conquer Europe, his Austrian father-in-law was one of the first to help crush him. And in the

The Girl Who Was a Soldier Boy

How I Went "Over There" With Pershing's Division

By HAZEL CARTER

Mrs. Hazel Carter of Douglas, Ariz., is a young woman, twenty-two, whose young husband, Corporal John J. Carter of the United States army, was ordered to France with the Pershing expedition.

Determined to accompany him, she obtained a soldier's uniform and fell in as a private on his departure. She was five days at sea on the transport before she was discovered and was returned home against her wishes.

CHAPTER IV.

The Jig's Up!

WHEN a rookie told me all the boys were talking about there being a woman on board the transport I knew things were getting mighty shaky for me.

Rookies like nothing better than crack wise, as the old timers call it, on anything connected with their troop. They have a keener sense for inside news than bird dog has for a flock of prairie chickens. This recruit was a specially busy one of the breed. He was as pleased over the prospect of a new thrill as a Mexican is over a plate of redhot chili con carne. It would be hot for me, all right, if they found me out.

By this time Smithers was proud of me as if I was his own private idea. He used to chuckle as much when an officer hove in sight and I stood at attention and saluted and got away with it as he did when the "bones" rolled him a good pot in a crap game. Then, if he saw me watching him, he would try to look very severe and growl:

"You shouldn't ought to 'a' done it, kiddie. Sure 'nuff you shouldn't."

What Cupid Smithers said when I told him the rookies were on the scent and were talking sounded like a word barrage from the heavy artillery. You could smell the sulphur in the air. No apologies either. He was mad clean through.

"What them young shavetails need is a set of knitting needles," he growled. "I tell you what you'd better do. You'd better find that talkative feller who tipped you off and see if you can't shame him out'n the idea."

That sounded fair enough. My courage began to pick up. The game was not over yet by a long way.

I found my rookie stern. He was with two or three other youngsters. They were licking Germans right and left, a favorite pastime of new men in uniform. The old campaigners avoid talk about soldiering. You would never know by their conversation whether they were on their way to a war or to a tea party. The rookies had the bocches halfway to Berlin and were using the Kaiser's helmet for a cuspidor when I broke in.

"Hey there, Kid Pinkerton," I raged. "Found the fem yet?"

"What do you mean?" demanded my rookie, blushing like a high school boy. He knew I was kidding him.

"Didn't you tell me there was a woman on board?"

"Sure I did. I heard—"

"Well, you sure are some fall guy. Maybe you heard we are going to fight the Fritzes with pen shooters too. You'd better get hep to yourself. The first thing you know you'll be answering to the name o' Patsy around here."

Rookie Silenced.

That last shot hit the boy hard. He suspected they were stringing him. Every soldier dreads being singled out for the butt of his comrades' jokes. An army Patsy has a pretty tough time of it. I was safe from that rookie, for the present at least.

I sneaked forward to the quarters where my husband was bunking as soon as "lights out." I was anxious to tell him what had happened. He was worried, but he tried not to show it. He told me to cheer up; that no matter what happened he would stand by. Was I happy? Ask me. After all, he might weaken and let me go with him into France. Right then I wouldn't have traded my trusty old doughboy outfit for the swellest wardrobe in New York city, and, from what we hear back in Arizona, that is saying a heap.

I didn't sleep much. I felt there was something in the air. Before midnight there was a submarine alarm. The old timer in the bunk under me hadn't hit the floor before he began to squawk.

"Some son of a sea cook has snared my life belt!" he complained loudly.

He was digging up his bunk like a dog after a rabbit. Blankets, shoes and clothes were flying in all directions. The alarm sergeant, whose duty it was to see that all hands were out of quarters and on deck, was prodding him none too gently to hasten him. A soldier from H company, a pal of his, came running up.

"Aw, g'wan, you rummy!" he called, stopping long enough to have a good laugh. "You've got it on you."

The old timer beat it quick. It was the first tip we had he was taking no chances on being kissed by a submarine. Afterward he insisted he had been trying it on and left it there by mistake, but the boys wouldn't listen to him. You're just as likely to get fitted to a coffin and forget about having it on as one of those seagoing life preservers. They had his number.

The next morning I decided not to risk going up for drill. The rumor about the woman was too fresh to be safe. If it had reached any of the off-cers they would be on the watch.

We turned out at 5 o'clock. Pulling on our shoes, we next folded our blankets, placed them at the head of our bunks and prepared for inspection. Everything was as neat and clean as a pin. Not a scrap of paper or a bit of refuse could be found anywhere. American soldiers are always clean. It is a hard and fast rule of the service. They never wait until Saturday night to take a bath. A regular always looks as if he had just been laundered.

I remained below, busying myself around the bunks. The men had been out only a few minutes when I heard voices. I glanced toward the entrance of our bunk room. Two lieutenants were coming toward me between the tiers. I slipped in between two bunks so I would be out of sight as much as possible and became very industrious. One of them saw me. I know now he was looking for me, but then there was a faint hope he was merely on regular inspection. Since I have been told every man on deck was carefully scrutinized. He strode up.

"What are you doing here?" he demanded.

I knew in a minute the rookies' rumors had reached the C. O.'s. I decided to bluff it through to the end. There was nothing to be lost by trying.

"I'm room orderly, sir," I replied, coming promptly to attention and saluting. The room orderly stays below to see everything is in order and shipshape.

"Your name?"

"Carter, sir—K company."

"Let me see your chest."

"Well, look at it."

I stood up squarely in front of him. It was my last chance.

"I will," he said, at the same time reaching out and grabbing my shirt to rip it open at the throat. I clutched his hand with both of mine and held on. The jig was up. I was not frightened. My only thought was for my husband. What would they do to him? I could not cry, although I tried my best. Being a woman, I thought it was expected of me. The lieutenant loosened his grip on my shirt. He took me gently but firmly by the arm.

"Don't worry, little girl. No one is going to hurt you," he said. His voice was husky. "You were certainly a game one," he added, which I took as a compliment.

Then, turning to the other one of the officers, he gave the order that ended my career as a doughboy—

"Send for the major!"

I did a lot of thinking during those silent few minutes while we were waiting for the major. Neither of the officers said a word. They seemed to be unable to realize such a thing could actually have happened right under their eyes. What! A woman come all the way from Douglas, Ariz., to "somewhere in the Atlantic" without getting wise? Nonsense! But there I was. They had to face the fact. So did I. What more I was going to face I did not know.

Facing the Music.

The major came in on the double quick, and he wasn't bothering much about his military bearing either. He was too excited to be anything except just natural. When he quickly convinced himself I was real and not a fake scare he sent for the quartermaster captain of the ship.

I wanted to see my husband pretty bad by this time. If he had appeared on the scene I guess I would just naturally have broken away from that bunch, officers or no officers, and grabbed him. They would have had to pry me away from Corporal Carter with a bayonet.

The quartermaster captain came in all a-bluster. He was as mad as a bear with a sore ear. A U boat would have been welcome alongside of me.

"What are your intentions?" he demanded. He gave me a swell imitation of a clap of thunder. He expected me to drop dead of fright, but I fooled him. This didn't help his temper any.

"I want to go to France and join the Red Cross," I said.

"Why didn't you join it at home instead of trying to make a goat out of the army?"

"I'm not trying to do anything but get to France with my husband," I answered. "If he is wounded I want to be there to take care of him. That goes for the rest of the boys in K company too. Why should I sit back home in a rocking chair and wait while some strange woman is nursing the one I love and his comrades? I'll go right to the trenches with him. I'll fight with him, and if he or any of the other boys are hurt I'll drop my gun and take care of them."

"We'll see about that," snapped the quartermaster captain. "Right now you'll come with me. Fall in there, men."

I marched up to the orderly room on the top deck with an advance and rear guard of one officer each. The Q. C. was in command of the ship. The others were trailers.

Without further ado court went into session. Of course they thought my whole trip had been fixed up by my husband and some of his men. They tried their best to get me to name my allies, but I never did. How could I when I didn't have any at the start? I told my story straight, exactly as it happened, and that is all there was to it. Not once did they trip me up. Finally they gave it up as a bad job and ordered me to a stateroom on the first deck, under guard.

Then they sent for my husband. The boys told me later that when an orderly came and told him he was wanted by the quartermaster captain he turned as white as a sheet and almost collapsed, but in a second he bucked up like a regular soldier. He couldn't obey orders quick enough, because he wanted to know what they had done with me. It was a shame, for he had never been up for anything before, and this hurt his record.

The first thing he blurted out when he reached that impromptu courtroom was:

"Where's the kid?" He was on. The only answer he got was a heavy volley of cold looks. It didn't take him long to discover a military court is no respecter of Cupid. He had a mighty uncomfortable half hour worrying, until he finally found out I was safe. All that time they kept him busy answering questions and denying he had planned the trip. It was hard to make them believe he did not know I was on the boat until we were well outside of Sandy Hook.

They brought me back to confront him and to question us together. Wasn't I proud of him, though, when I saw him standing there, straight and trim and full of courage, his chin in the air, his shoulders back, ready to face any kind of music they had to play! He half started toward me, and I made a running jump for him.

"Attention!" shouted the quartermaster captain, pounding the desk with his fist. It was a hard situation for him to handle. He saw that. We both stopped short and fell into position. The habits and discipline of the army certainly get a grip on you.

On the Grill.

I don't know how long we were on the grill. It seemed ages to me. We stuck to our story—the truth. They brought in the first sergeant of my husband's company and questioned him too. He had to admit he knew nothing about it. He might have suspected, but he figured it was none of his business. He didn't add this, however. Sticking your nose into other people's affairs is a dangerous pastime in the army.

Things looked pretty tough for us at times, but I did not lose my sense of humor. The Q. C. kept referring to me as "he" part of the time and "she" the other part. Now I was "Carter." Like a regular, and again I was Mrs. Carter. When he looked at me in my soldier suit, with my hair cut short like a man's, he could not figure me as anything but a doughboy.

Finally they ordered the guards to take me back to the stateroom. I did not care what happened to me as long as they did not court martial the "old man," as the soldier's wife calls her husband. I knew that would break his heart and mine too.

While I was pacing the floor of that small room waiting to hear what they had decided to do a couple of rookies passed outside the porthole.

"Whaddye think they'll do with her?" asked one rookie.

"I dunno. One o' the men that was over in the Philippines sez they'll either call out the firing squad and have her shot at sunrise or else they'll make her walk the plank."

"You mean they'll put out a plant and make her walk off the end of it into the ocean?"

"Sure. One o' the men that was over in the Phillipines—"

I strained my ears, but I could not hear any more. The rookies had passed out of earshot. I hoped by the time they made me walk the plank I would be near enough to France to swim ashore. Then the laugh would be on them. The prospect didn't disturb me much.

After what seemed several years, though as a matter of fact it was only a few minutes, my husband came to my room. He looked very solemn. I ran to him. He took me in his arms and held me tight for a long time. Then he began to pull off his coat.

"Tell me," I begged.

"I lose my stripes," he said. "I am no longer Corporal Carter, but Private Carter."

From the tone of his voice and the light in his eyes I knew he did not regret the stripes. Neither did I. Being with him all this time was worth it.

"Private Carter," I said, "I salute you, sir." And I did with a great big fat kiss.

Then I sat down on the edge of the berth and with my own hands ripped the stripes from his sleeve.
